Charities – an initial point of contact for support

Veterans’ Gateway
Veterans’ Gateway is the first point of contact for veterans seeking support. Veterans’ Gateway puts veterans and their families in touch with the organisations best placed to help with the information, advice, and support they need – healthcare, housing, employability, finances, personal relationships, and more.
It is made up of a consortium of organisations and Armed Forces charities, including the Royal British Legion, SSAFA – the Armed Forces charity, Poppyscotland, Combat Stress, and Connect Assist. Their connections with key referral organisations, both within and outside the Armed Forces sector, means they can get the veteran to the right organisation that can help.

Family Information Services
Most Local Authorities provide a Family Information Service (FIS). The FIS offers free help and advice on all aspects of family life to parents, carers, young people, and anyone working with families in the Local Authority area. The FIS holds information on a range of subjects, but if they can’t help directly, they will put the enquirer in touch with someone who can. The services vary across the UK, so different areas will provide a different range of services.

The Naval Families Federation (NFF)
The NFF, established in 2003, wants Royal Navy and Royal Marines families to feel valued and to be heard. They talk directly with families of all shapes and forms, across the UK and overseas, through their Portsmouth based and regional teams, enquiries desk, and social media. Their job is to ‘take the temperature’ of families’ views on different subjects.

They aim to ensure that Naval Service families have the best quality of life possible, and have access to the resources they need to make good choices and to achieve positive outcomes. They have information and resources on a range of topics on their website.

Winston’s Wish

Winston’s Wish provides information that will be helpful to families and also professionals who come into contact with children and young people from Armed Forces families who have been bereaved.

Bereaved AF families face added difficulties around the issues of funerals and other memorials and may feel the Armed Forces system takes over when they would prefer to take control for themselves. Winston’s Wish aims to support children who have been bereaved by providing specialist child bereavement support services across the UK, including in-depth therapeutic help in individual, group, and residential settings.
